Financial Sacrifice and Waqfe Jadid 2018

Whatever we spend in the cause of Allah, is deposited into our own account. And when we will need of it, Allah the Almighty will return it.

By the grace of Allah the Almighty, this can be observed among the Jama'at of the Promised Messiah (as) even today.

Next Huzoor announced the commencement of the new year for Waqf-e-Jadid and related many faith-inspiring accounts of financial sacrifice from across the globe.

After Pakistan, who as always remain in the first position, in the rest of the world in terms of total contribution UK is first.

Financial Sacrifice

In the Holy Qur'an, we find that at numerous places, a believers' attention has been drawn towards financial sacrifice.

At one place, Allah the Almighty states,
'wa maa tunfiqoo min khairin fa li-anfusikum' i.e.
'And whatever of wealth you spend, it is for yourselves'.
[2:273]

Alongside this, a trait of the believers has also been mentioned that they only spend in order to attain the pleasure of Allah. [The Holy Qur'an] states that,
'wa maa tunfiqoona illabtighaa'a wajhillah' i.e.
'...you spend not but to seek the favour of Allah'.

Thus, how fortunate are those people who spend their wealth in the way of God the Almighty with this approach.

Inspiring
accounts

Allah the Almighty does not require any wealth for Himself.

The very meaning of spending for His sake is to spend for the betterment of His creation and for the pre-eminence of His religion.

Waqfe

While referring to Allah the Almighty, the Holy Prophet (sa) said (in qudsi Hadith) that,

Funeral

'O son of Adam! Deposit your wealth with me and rest at peace for it is neither in danger of being consumed by fire nor of being drowned in water, nor of being stolen by a thief. I shall return in full, the treasure that you deposit with me, on the Day when you will be in most need of it.'

This means that whatever we spend in the cause of Allah, is deposited into our own account. And when we will need of it, Allah the Almighty will return it.

Likewise, it is mentioned in a narration that the Holy Prophet (sa) said that, 'On the Day of Resurrection, those who spend in the way of Allah will remain under the shadow of the wealth they had spent in the way of Allah until the judgement will have come to an end.

However, the Holy Prophet (sa) has also stipulated that Allah the Almighty does not like impure wealth. Thus, we should always keep in mind that our wealth should always remain pure.

The companions of the Holy Prophet (sa) both rich and poor, used to earn and give charity with and hard work and toil only to attain the pleasure of Allah the Almighty

There is one narration with regards to Hazrat Abu Bakr Siddiq (ra) that when he accepted Islam, he had the savings of forty thousand Ashrafis [currency unit] apart from his business and property. If we compare the golden Ashrafi of that time to its value today, it is perhaps equivalent to eleven or twelve million pounds.

Hazrat Khalifat-ul-Masih I (ra), made innumerable sacrifices whenever the Promised Messiah (as) made an appeal. He was a doctor by profession and a civil servant. He was rather affluent. The Promised Messiah (as) has included him amongst his twelve disciples. .... And gave him the honour [saying] that you have offered such immense sacrifices for the sake of this Jama'at that you are no longer in need of making any further sacrifices.

However, despite receiving this honour, he did not refrain from offering sacrifices. Rather, he continued to do so.

When the Promised Messiah (as) was engaged in the lawsuit in Gurdaspur, he made an appeal [for financial sacrifices] to his friends as the expenses were increasing

Khalifa Rashid-ud-Din Sahib, who coincidentally received his wage the very day he became aware of this appeal, sent his entire salary to the Promised Messiah (as), which was four hundred and fifty rupees at that time and a large amount, equivalent to hundreds of thousands today.

His friend told him that he should have kept something for the necessities of his home and family. Upon this he replied that if God's Messiah says that this is needed for the sake of religion, then for what purpose should I have kept something? Thus, if this is needed for religion, then everything will go towards religion.

Promised Messiah (AS) says

The Promised Messiah (as) has also mentioned the sacrifices of some of his impoverished Ahmadis in a most affectionate manner.

Allah the Almighty has instilled within the Jama'at of the Promised Messiah (as) such a comprehension of this [system of] sacrifices, which as I said, has not been instilled within anyone else

I will narrate some faith inspiring incidents in relation to the financial sacrifices towards Waqf-e-Jadid and how Allah the Almighty, as a result of their sacrifices, blesses them in this world, which subsequently becomes a means of strengthening their faith

Amir sahib [president] of Burkina Faso writes that the Khuddam living near the Jama'at of Kari Khuddam carried out this task of digging together to lay the electric cables for the amount of one million CFA francs, which is equivalent to approximately one thousand two hundred and fifty pounds, they paid this towards the Chanda of Waqf-e-Jadid. Thus, this is the passion which, as I mentioned, cannot be seen outside of the Ahmadiyya Jama'at today.
