Summary Rightly Guided Caliphs – Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra)

Rights of People of Other Faiths Under Muslim Rule

Compilation of Quran

Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) also tended to the rights of those known as Zimmi – those who had accepted Muslim rule and payed the Jizyah but maintained their own faith.

Pioneer Muslim

These people were not expected to join the Muslim army nor were they expected to pay Zakat, however on account of their payment of Jizyah, they and their places of worship remained secure and protected.

The Compilation of the Holy Qur'an

An extraordinary achievement during the era of Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) was the compilation of the Holy Qur'an.

The background of this is linked to the Battle of Yamamah, in which 1,200 Muslims were martyred, many of whom were senior companions who had memorised the Qur'an.

In light of this, Hazrat Umar (ra) was divinely inspired with the idea of compiling the Holy Qur'an in one place

Hazrat Umar (ra) suggested this idea to Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra).

Hazrat Umar (ra) suggested this so many times that Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) was eventually convinced that this was the best course of action.

Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) instructed Hazrat Zaid (ra) to gather the various parts of the Holy Qur'an which had been written on branches and stones and which people had memorised.

The Compilation of the Holy Qur'an

His Holiness (aba) quoted Imam Baghawi and Hazrat Mirza Bashiruddin Mahmud Ahmad (ra) who wrote that the Qur'an was gathered in its entirety, exactly as it had been revealed to the Holy Prophet (sa).

Initially, the Holy Qur'an was not gathered in one place, rather different parts were written in different places.

With the martyrdom of many senior Companions who had committed the Qur'an to memory, Hazrat Umar (ra) deemed it vital for the preservation of the Holy Qur'an to gather it.

Hence, the Holy Qur'an was gathered and was brought into a single book form for the first time during the era of Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra).

The Compilation of the Holy Qur'an

Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) had appointed Hazrat Zaid (ra) for this task, seeing as he was trustworthy and used to write the revelations received by the Holy Prophet (sa).

The various parts of the Holy Qur'an were gathered, and they would be attested to by those; who had learned the Holy Qur'an from the Holy Prophet (sa), had been scribes for Qur'anic revelation and had committed it to memory.

Hence, in this way, it was ensured that the Holy Qur'an remained in its original form, as revealed to the Holy Prophet (sa).

Hazrat Mirza Bashiruddin Mahmud Ahmad (ra) responded to the allegation that all of the Holy Qur'an had not been written during the lifetime of the Holy Prophet (sa).

Pioneer Muslim

He stated that it certainly was written and this is known because it is found in traditions that whenever the Holy Prophet (sa) received a Qur'anic revelation, he would summon scribes and instruct them to write it down.

However, it was not compiled into a single book form as we have today. It was thus written in its entirety during the life of the Holy Prophet (sa).

Time of the Inscription of the Holy Qur'an & Dealing with Different Dialects

Compilation of Quran

The Holy Qur'an was compiled during the lifetime of Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) and a single dialect of reciting it was enacted during the lifetime of Hazrat Uthman (ra).

Pioneer Muslim Dialects refers to the fact that Arabs from different localities had different ways of pronouncing certain words.

Appearance

As such, although the words were the same, the different pronunciation posed potential confusion to those with less knowledge.

Piety and humility

Hence, Hazrat Uthman (ra) instructed that copies should be made of the Holy Qur'an that was compiled during the time of Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) and it should be distributed.

The Compilation of the Holy Qur'an

The Holy Prophet (sa) had made it his practice to ensure that each Qur'anic revelation was written down.

He would also ensure that each verse was placed in its right place, in the order guided by Hazrat Jibrael (as).

It was according to this exact same order formed by the Holy Prophet (sa) that Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) compiled the Holy Qur'an.

The first copy of the Holy Qur'an that was compiled remained with Hazrat Abu Bakr (ra) until his passing.

It was then in the possession of Hazrat Umar (ra), who entrusted it to Hazrat Hafsah (ra) with the instruction of not giving it to anyone else, except to copy it.

Hence it remained with her and Hazrat Uthman (ra) borrowed it to have copies made, after which it was returned to Hazrat Hafsah (ra).

After the demise of Hazrat Hafsah (ra), Marwan, the ruler of Madinah at the time, took the copy and it was destroyed.

However, by this time, many copies had been made under the supervision of Hazrat Uthman (ra).
